

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson

Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

The Hollywood establishment often criticizes actor Kirk Cameron. But he's found his best role as a believer who takes his faith seriously.

As the California sun sets over the Santa Monica Pier, Kirk Cameron approaches four rough-looking shirtless guys with big tattoos and shaved heads. The actor is filming an episode of the evangelistic television series The Way of the Master, but these men are not extras for the program; they're total strangers. He doesn't know how they will respond to the questions he has for them.

Cameron begins a conversation about God and asks one of the men—Mario—if he believes he's a good person. "Yeah," Mario says flatly, as his friend Alvie and the two other men gather ominously around the former teen idol who starred in the ABC family sitcom Growing Pains from 1985-1992.

Using the Ten Commandments like a moral mirror, Cameron asks Mario to examine himself in light of God's standards. Has he ever lied, stolen or committed adultery by looking at a woman with lust? Mario admits he's committed all those sins and concedes he would be guilty before God on the day of judgment.

Confiding he too has been sinful, Cameron tells Mario as a good judge God must one day punish sinners and that the place of punishment is hell. But, he adds, Jesus Christ took the punishment for his sins by dying on the cross and Mario too can have eternal life by putting his faith in Jesus.

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson

Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

The encounter, filmed several years ago for the award-winning TV show and radio program, has since been viewed more than 300,000 times on YouTube.

“We later found out [Mario and Alvie]—who at the time were on drugs and homeless on the streets—had come to the Lord and became Christians,” Cameron told Charisma during a recent interview at a Los Angeles-area hotel. “We saw [Alvie] at a rally holding up a sign saying, ‘Abortion Is Wrong.’ He told us he loves the Lord and reads his Bible every day.”

Some five years had passed since Cameron shared his faith on the pier that day. Astounded by the result of his encounter, Cameron says the men’s conversions remind him of what the Bible says in 1 Corinthians 3:5-7, that one person plants the gospel seed and another waters it but God makes it grow.

“Never be discouraged when you sow the gospel into the heart of an unbeliever,” says evangelist Ray Comfort—co-host with Cameron on The Way of the Master and the developer of Hell’s Best Kept

Secret, a method of open-air preaching.

With the release last summer of Conquer Your Fear: Share Your Faith, which Cameron co-wrote with Comfort, the star of Fireproof and the Left Behind movies is on a mission to encourage Christians to overcome their fears and share their faith with a world in dire need of the truth.

Troubled by studies that show only 2 percent of evangelical Christians tell others about Jesus, Cameron is passionate about equipping believers with the biblical tools they need to share the spiritual salvation message of Jesus.

“To effectively share your faith, you don’t need a Ph.D. in church history. You don’t need to be an archaeologist, and you don’t need to know Greek,” he says.

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson

Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

"You just need to let love swallow your fears and learn a couple of simple principles that Jesus used in the Scriptures to be able to effectively reach people with the gospel."

That simplicity of the gospel—appealing to the conscience of hearers rather than getting stuck in heady, intellectual arguing matches with people—is what the two teach. They note that every 24 hours 150,000 people pass from "time to eternity." And although many prophecy teachers believe there is little left on God's "prophetic calendar" before the Second Coming occurs, the body of Christ in America is a "sleeping giant" that needs to overcome its "evangelophobia," they state.

"Every time I see an act of lawlessness, a dead church system, a nation rising against another nation, people loving pleasure and ignoring God, an increase in immorality, turmoil in the Middle East, a collapse of a financial system and even the rise of atheism, I check off another sign of the end of the age," Cameron writes. "Of all times in history, this isn't a time for Christians to sit back and do nothing."

Spiritual Growing Pains

Ironically, Cameron hasn't always been a passionate preacher. Although he grew up in a conservative family, he was not raised in a churchgoing home and was a devout atheist from a young age. His dad told Cameron's mother he wanted his children to choose their own religious path in life, which laid the foundation for Cameron's earliest religious choice as a "full-fledged atheist," Cameron wrote in his 2008 autobiography, Still Growing.

Named after his dad's favorite TV character—Capt. Kirk of Star Trek—Cameron was born October 12, 1970, and grew up in Canoga Park, California, in the San Fernando Valley of Los Angeles. During his childhood, his mom became friends with the mother of Adam Rich, a star on the television sitcom

It Is Enough

Eig

. Rich's mother encouraged them to see her agent about TV work for the young Cameron.

They did, and although Cameron dreamed of becoming an astronaut or fireman, he began instead a career in Hollywood at age 9 with appearances on commercials and TV shows.

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson

Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

Naturally shy, yet very funny, Cameron at age 14 landed the role of the charming troublemaker Mike Seaver on Growing Pains—putting him in girls' hearts and on the covers of teen magazines. At one point, he was receiving 10,000 fan letters a week.

"It was exciting," says the twice Golden Globe-nominated actor, now 39. "It warped your sense of reality and sort of makes you think that somehow the world revolves around you. I'm really thankful for my parents and ultimately to God for rescuing me from a completely self-absorbed, narcissistic way of looking at life and setting me on the right path—helping me to understand this world is God's world and I'm not the center of it; God is."

Although he had obtained what most boys the world over craved—fame, fortune and the adoration of girls everywhere—Cameron's life amid chauffeurs, security guards and paparazzi only seemed to heighten his teen insecurities. He thought being rich and famous would make him "infinitely happy," but he began to ask himself deep questions instead.

Initially interested in New Age claims that each person is god and can make up his own rules, the 17-year-old soon turned his attention to Christianity after a female friend invited him to church.

"I was right in the middle of Growing Pains, things were going great, and I was on top of the world," Cameron says. "But a friend had invited me to go to church one Sunday. I really wasn't interested in church or God, but I wanted to hang out with this person.

"So I went and was just really captured by the message. I was asking myself questions like: 'How did we get here? What happens after we die?' And these questions were answered by the Bible in a very persuasive way."

Drawn by the Holy Spirit, Cameron became preoccupied with spiritual questions. The girl's father gave him a copy of Josh McDowell's classic book on Christian apologetics, More Than a Carpenter.

To his surprise, he learned many of his intellectual heroes—including Albert Einstein, Sir Isaac

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson

Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

Newton and Copernicus—believed in God. One day, after dropping his friend off at her acting class, Cameron sat in his sports car on Van Nuys Boulevard and prayed.

“I was just thinking that I could get in a car accident and die, and at that moment I’d find out if there is a God,” Cameron says. “And so that’s when I prayed: ‘God, if You are there, I need to know. Please show me. I don’t want to get tied up in false religion, but if You are there, I want You to reveal yourself to me.’”

His conversion shocked those who knew him. As he lived out his faith, it ignited controversy on the set of Growing Pains. Despite the growing tension, Cameron met his future wife on the show, Chelsea Noble, who played his fictional girlfriend Kate.

A New Stage

Since Cameron disclosed his faith in Christ, the Hollywood establishment has criticized him often, but he’s found his best role as a believer who takes his faith seriously.

“I get mocked, I get slandered, I get blacklisted; but that really shouldn’t surprise us because Jesus said all those who live godly in Christ Jesus will suffer persecution,” Cameron says.

Since Growing Pains ended in 1992, Cameron has appeared in dozens of television shows and movies. From 2000 to 2005, he played reporter Buck Williams in three Left Behind movies, which chronicle events after God removes Christians from Earth in the rapture. The movies have helped inspire people to share their faith because no one has “forever here on this Earth,” Cameron says.

While attending a book convention in 2000 to promote the movie, a fan handed Cameron a training CD by Comfort that demonstrates how Christians can share their faith using the Ten Commandments. Describing the teaching’s effect on him as “foundation-shaking,” Cameron later called Comfort—whom he calls the “funny little character” who reminds him of the apostle Paul.

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson

Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

Comfort sent him a copy of his book God Has a Wonderful Plan for Your Life: The Myth of the Modern Message, which features prominently on the cover a picture of Stephen the martyr being stoned to death. The book had a profound impact on Cameron, and he rededicated his life to the Lord. Not long afterward, he watched a video of Comfort publicly preaching outside a Hare Krishna convention in New York City.

"I was just stunned," Cameron says. "Here he was, in the middle of a Hare Krishna convention, preaching to a crowd of people at a mock funeral he had staged—a guy was underneath a sheet with a bunch of pall bearers—and he's talking about the fact that every one of us has an appointment with death.

"I was just riveted to the screen, watching him as he intelligently reasoned with people. I was so intrigued by it, I thought to myself, We've got to get this message out to the church somehow."

Later, the two men had lunch together and decided to create The Way of the Master program to teach Christians how to share the gospel. Today the show is seen in 70 countries.

In 2008, Cameron played Caleb Holt, a firefighter struggling to save his marriage, in the independent Fireproof movie. The film and the accompanying book—The Love Dare—have helped save numerous marriages.

As he travels the country speaking on the subject of marriage, Cameron notes that many people get counseling or read a book and try to use its techniques to fix their marriage, but often wind up divorced anyway.

"The real problem lies in the heart—as long as you have two people who are selfish, all the different techniques are not going to help," Cameron says.

"Only God can change a sinful heart and cause a person to deny themselves, surrender to the Lord and love their spouse unconditionally; and that's what is necessary to make a marriage healthy."

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson
Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

Today Cameron and Chelsea have been married 18 years and have six children, four of them adopted.

"We love kids," he says. "I come from a family of four children, and my wife is an adopted child herself, and she always wanted to adopt children. It's kind of like the Brady Bunch. We have three boys and three girls."

Cameron will share the stage with singer-songwriter Warren Barfield for the Love Worth Fighting For tour scheduled in March and April in Lexington, Kentucky, and Atlanta.

The nonprofit events bring Christian speakers, authors and performing artists together to raise money for the needy. The two men previously worked together on Fireproof, which featured Barfield's song "Love Is Not a Fight."

Meanwhile, Cameron wants to see Christians equipped and awakened to go into the harvest and share the gospel with the lost. Churches are full of laborers who have been given the secret of eternal life, he says, yet they aren't sharing it because they fear what other people will think.

"We've found the cure to death," Cameron says. "We've found the one thing that can wash away our sin, shame, guilt and pain and that will give us joy, hope and eternal life."

"The question is why we aren't telling people about this. Why don't we have an excitement for evangelism?"

"When you really think about it, we've found the fountain of youth. At least you'd tell your friends. If they didn't want to go, fine, but at least you'd tell them."

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson
Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

Troy Anderson is a reporter with the Los Angeles Daily News.

---

KIRK CAMERON VIDEO

Watch Kirk Cameron share how God miraculously transformed his life at a point when he was rich, famous—and an atheist. Go to cameron.charismamag.com.

---

Front-Line Evangelists

Kirk Cameron and Ray Comfort recently led an 'atheistic evolution' revolution at U.S. universities.

Evangelists Kirk Cameron and Ray Comfort teamed up recently at the University of California, Los Angeles, to do something out of the ordinary for most Christians. They passed out hundreds of copies of Charles Darwin's book, On the Origin of Species. But along with his treatise on evolution they included a special 54-page introduction that presented the case for intelligent design.

In a video encouraging Christians to participate in the book giveaway, Cameron observed that one-by-one the nation's God-given liberties are being stripped away: "Our kids can no longer pray in public, they can no longer open a Bible in school, and the Ten Commandments are no longer allowed to be displayed in public places."

More than 1,200 people nationwide inspired by the men's call to provide the truth to a "generation brainwashed by atheistic evolution" joined them in handing out 170,000 copies of the book at 100 of the nation's top universities.

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson
Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

Engaging in this kind of “front-line” evangelism is imperative, Cameron says, because university professors are telling college students that God doesn’t exist and science has proved it—teachings that seriously undermine young people’s faith.

“It’s such a deception,” he says. “If you look into the real science of it, you’ll see that evolution is nothing more than an atheistic philosophy disguised as science, not supported by real science, popular opinion or even common sense.

“The movie Expelled: No Intelligence Allowed shows how bias has crept into the scientific community and not allowed intelligent design to even be discussed. We want to put confidence back into kids about the Bible and give them the other side of the debate.”

Ken Ham, founder and president of Answers in Genesis and the Creation Museum in Kentucky, says he helped promote the book because Cameron is challenging the collapse of the Christian worldview by taking a stand for the authority of Genesis.

“I admire him because he’s prepared to stand unashamedly on God’s Word and against evolution, which is a major force in creating doubt and unbelief in generations of kids,” Ham says. “Research has shown two-thirds of young people are leaving the church. It really comes down to doubts in regards to God’s Word.”

Ham says that while the church in America is floundering and people are not being “bold in their faith,” Cameron recognizes the need to be like the apostle Paul—unashamed of the gospel.

---

A Life on the Screen

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson

Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

From Growing Pains to Fireproof, Kirk Cameron has matured as both an actor and a Christian.

It seems like Kirk Cameron was destined for a career in television and film. He was only 9 when he started acting, first in commercials and then on TV shows. He was even named after his dad's favorite TV character, Capt. Kirk of Star Trek, when he was born in 1970 in Panorama City, California. Today he's an award-winning actor who most recently starred in the evangelistic movie Fireproof (2008). Here's a look at his life onscreen:

TELEVISION

- 1981 Bret Maverick (boy #1)
- 1982 Disneyland (boy)
- 1982 Herbie the Matchmaker
(young boy)
- 1983 Two Marriages
("Eric Armstrong")
- 1983 ABC Afterschool
Specials ("Jeff")
- 1984 Children in the Crossfire
("Mickey Chandler")
- 1984 More Than Murder ("Bobby")

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson
Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

- 1985-92 Growing Pains
("Mike Seaver")
- 1988 Full House ("Cousin Steve")
- 1991 A Little Piece of Heaven ("Will Loomis")
- 1993 The Horde ("Chauncey")
- 1994 Star Struck ("Runner")
- 1995 The Computer Wore Tennis Shoes ("Dexter Riley")
- 1995-96 Kirk ("Kirk Hartman")
- 2002 Family Law ("Mitchell Stark")
- 2001 Touched by an Angel
("Chuck Parker")
- 2003-present The Way of the Master (himself)

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson

Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

- 2005 Night of Joy (host)
- 2009 18 Kids and Counting (himself)

FILM

- 1981 Goliath Awaits ("Liam")
- 1982 Beyond Witch Mountain (boy)
- 1983 Starflight: The Plane That Couldn't Land ("Gary")
- 1986 The Best of Times ("Teddy")
- 1987 Like Father, Like Son ("Chris Hammond")
- 1989 Listen to Me ("Tucker Muldowney")
- 1991 A Little Piece of Heaven ("Will Loomis")

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson
Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

- 1998 You Lucky Dog ("Jack Morgan")
- 2000 The Growing Pains Movie ("Mike Seaver")
- 2000 Left Behind ("Buck Williams")
- 2001 The Miracle of the Cards ("Josh")
- 2002 Left Behind II: Tribulation Force ("Buck Williams")
- 2004 Growing Pains: Return of the Seavers ("Mike Seaver")
- 2005 Left Behind: World at War ("Buck Williams")
- 2008 Fireproof ("Caleb Holt")

AWARDS

Young Artist Award

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson

Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

- 1986 for TV series Growing Pains (won)

- 1987 Best Young Male Superstar:
Growing Pains (won)

- 1987 Exceptional Performance by a
Young Actor: Growing Pains (won)

- 1989 for film Listen to Me (nominated)

Saturn Award

- 1987 for film Like Father, Like Son (won)

Golden Globe Award

- 1987 for Growing Pains (nominated)

- 1989 for Growing Pains (nominated)

People's Choice Award

- 1988 Favorite Young TV
Performer (won)

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson
Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---

- 1989 Favorite Young TV Performer (won)

Nickelodeon Kids' Choice Award

- 1990 Favorite TV Actor:
Growing Pains (Won)
-

The Big Kiss

For his first onscreen kiss with fellow cast member Chelsea Noble on the ABC sitcom Growing Pains, Kirk Cameron secretly rubbed numbing gel on his lips that left the actress' mouth briefly paralyzed after the big smooch.

Cameron, who was a teen heartthrob at the time, made the most of Noble's dismay by hamming up the post-kiss moment for the TV audience:

"What can I say? That's the effect I have on girls. My kisses are electrifying," he quipped.

The first kiss proved to be the charm. Cameron and Noble (above) soon began dating offscreen and married in 1991.

That was 18 years ago. They remain inseparable today and now have six kids.

He's Not Just Acting

Written by Troy Anderson

Monday, 01 March 2010 03:45 PM EST

---